Wenger Feeds Announces Pullet Grower, Egg Producer Awards

Rheems, PA (July 9, 2010) — Dutchland Farms, Wenger Feeds' egg production division, announced its Pullet Grower and Egg Producer Awards for the 2009 calendar year.

Each year, Dutchland recognizes the top pullet grower and egg producer for overall flock performance. The Pullet Growers of the Year are Earl and Louella Zimmerman of Newmanstown, PA. When asked the reason for their success, Earl noted, "Getting good chicks from the hatchery is the first thing. Good quality feed and a good service tech are also contributing factors."

Two Egg Producers were recognized in the calendar year for their outstanding performance. Jack Newcomer of Mount Joy, PA maintained superior performance, and noted the reason for his success "starts with getting a good chicken. After that you just need to do your job (taking care of the birds) and the chicken will do the rest."

The second Egg Producers recognized were John, Joy, and Stephen Lauver of McAlisterville, PA. Their flock of Lohmann birds achieved outstanding performance numbers. When asked the reason for their success Stephen also credited a healthy pullet. John added that, "weather, good ventilation and quality feed along with a good start up are all important. Our goal is to do everything right every day."

Congratulations to all the award winners. Each received a plaque they can display at their farm.
